People in Toronto are bombarded with info about cancer. Many people know someone who's had it. The new normal is 40% of us are supposed to get it. There are many ways to deal with this. So, let's look at what's being done so far, how these ways are working, what our options are, and what we can do.

We see news stories every day about how what we all use or consume may cause cancer. We're also encouraged by big banks, drug companies, governments and corporate co-sponsors to run marathons (etc.) to raise money for more drugs. This has gone on for decades. But, more of us are getting cancer.

Many good people don't see this as a problem. Yet. But, if they're honest, they should realize that if we just keep running marathons to feel good without asking for better results, then we may feel bad dying of cancer later. After 80 years and billions of dollars in re-search, we should look into what's happening.

Psychologically, we get attached to the idea of "raising money for a cure" as part of our culture. I grew up idolizing Terry Fox, like most kids, but 30 years after his death, I'm sure he hoped that we'd be less likely to die from cancer, not more. If people want to respect his memory, they'd share all our options.

Terry Fox Run attracts hundreds in Beaches

This was the 29th year of the Toronto Beaches Terry Fox Run. Over the years, the event has attracted 9,000 participants and raised more than $1 million. Thousands participated in similar runs at locations across Canada. "In Ontario, 92 cents of every dollar raised goes to cancer research. There are only 12 other sites that have raised over $1 million," said Paul McCourt, the organizer of the Beaches run.

I heard the Toronto Terry Fox Run (Sep 18th) was mobs of people whipped into a frenzy by slogans and giant propaganda banners. They don't even bother telling us about any progress they've made anymore. While it's fun to be part of a big feel-good rock concert, many mobs are only created to be controlled.

So: why do the same governments and corporations that poison us also try to help cure us? So we trust them. Not to help us cure cancer. Even cancer charities say they're not close to a cure. Big drug companies don't need the $1 million Toronto raised over 30 years. This is a giant PR exercise for us.

CIBC goes "Pink" as employees across Canada celebrate Think Pink(TM) week

TORONTO, Sept. 16 /CNW/ - CIBC employees all across Canada are wearing pink and taking part in a variety of events in the days leading up to the Canadian Breast Cancer Foundation CIBC Run for the Cure. The events are in celebration of Think Pink(TM) week at CIBC, an annual initiative to raise awareness for the Run, which this year takes place on Sunday, October 3.

You can check the Big Cancer websites, there's almost nothing there about "preventing" cancer, just about how much we need to raise money to solve it in the same ways that have failed for decades. The CIBC Breast Cancer Run is the same thing. We can't get used to this cycle of failure. It's life or death.

We should know that Big Cancer is the most profitable charity industry in history. Most charities have higher, but the Terry Fox Run can give 92% of the money they raise for re-search because they make so much money that just 8% is enough for admin costs. This sounds good: but what have they done?

Worldwide, millions of people look into alternative info about cancer. The only reason every Canadian doesn't know what they've found is the establishment convinces us to defend them instead of listen to each other, which weakens our relationships. We have to change this for a bunch of good reasons.

Below are good articles, websites, videos and movies about how we can prevent or treat cancer, please pass them on since it's a hot topic in our culture. Testimonials from thousands of people who've tried alternative treatments or cures should convince us, so hopefully all of Toronto will learn this stuff soon.

Finally, of course we can still enjoy running and rock concerts, so please do! :-)

Warm regards,

Vijay

Socially active environment can cause cancer tumors to shrink and even disappear

... The new study, published in the July 9th issues of the journal Cell found that when mice with cancer were given enriched living conditions and a boost in their social life, their tumors shrank -- and some of their cancers disappeared completely.

Cheap, 'safe' drug kills most cancers

... Evangelos Michelakis of the University of Alberta in Edmonton, Canada, and his colleagues tested DCA on human cells cultured outside the body and found that it killed lung, breast and brain cancer cells, but not healthy cells. Tumours in rats deliberately infected with human cancer also shrank drastically when they were fed DCA-laced water for several weeks.

Mammograms cause breast cancer (and other cancer facts you probably never knew)

...In the 1960s and 70s, women, even those who received 10 screenings a year, were never told the risk they faced from exposure. In the midst of the 1976 radiation debate, Kodak, a major manufacturer of mammography film, took out full-page ads in scientific journals entitled "About breast cancer and X-rays: A hopeful message from industry on a sober topic."

Newsweek: The Case for Killing Granny

... The idea that we might ration health care to seniors (or anyone else) is political anathema. Politicians do not dare breathe the R word, lest they be accused—however wrongly—of trying to pull the plug on Grandma. But the need to spend less money on the elderly at the end of life is the elephant in the room in the health-reform debate. Everyone sees it but no one wants to talk about it.

Note: I think this is insane anywhere, but unfortunately it's being contemplated everywhere -- Vij
